

One thing is pretty evident here: a single girl can't stop this speeding train.

Heck, all the squirrels in the world couldn't save it now either.

But someone who's part squirrel, part girl?

This isn't gonna work, Doreen! We're out of time!

KREEEE

Well, now we're talking.

That's the secret to being unbeatable, Tippy:

Always have a Plan B.

Is this Plan B gonna hurt? It looks like this Plan B's gonna hurt.

Tips, I think we're about to find out!!

Look, up in the tree! It's Squirrel Girl: able to leap tall buildings in a single bound! More powerful than a locomotive! Not as fast as a speeding bullet, sure, but let's remember: more powerful than a locomotive! That's still pretty great!

Anyway, the rest of this book is just Squirrel Girl holding up trains over and over again. Wait, did they not accept my proposed title of "Squirrel Girl Holds Up a Bunch of Trains"? Subtitled "Not in the 'This is a Hold Up' Sense," subsubtitled "No, Not in the 'Delay the Train' Sense Either," subsubsubtitled "In the 'Physically Support the Train' Sense, Yes, That is Absolutely the Book We Chose to Make"??
